

Workshop: Having Difficult Conversations

Centre for Graduate Mentorship & Supervision,
University of Toronto

This workshop offers participants a step-by-step guide to having difficult conversations. Participants will review the reasons why we seldom have difficult or uncomfortable conversations and provided with a case for having them. As participants are lead through our approach to difficult conversations, they will be offered examples and suggestions for inviting, having, and capturing these conversations. Participants will be provided with case studies and asked to make use of what they have learned in guided group conversations.

The workshop was designed for faculty members. All other members of the department are welcome to join, however for students we recommend attending the student-equivalent workshop on October 12th, 2023. The PSME committee (Professional Standards in Mentorship and Education) recommends this workshop as a unique training opportunity for all our faculty members.
